Welcome to Ava Guy and her family. Ava joined Piwakawaka Class last week. Her first day was exciting for everyone as it started with a Powhiri. Ava's friends from her Kohanga all visited Kimi Ora and it was a festive, vibrant atmosphere.

Introducing Hafren Jones...

My name is Hafren Jones. I am a Zambian/Welsh New Zealander. Growing up in a musical family, I had the privilege of watching my father use music to help people with very diverse needs. I watched him train my godsister who has Down syndrome how to sing and entertain guests with tuberculosis and orphan boys from the streets. I have watched him work with a child who struggles to speak and several boys with autism. Having sung for her majesty Queen Elizabeth, he has not only passed to me his musical talents, but also love and care and concern for others. I completed my Bachelor of Music in Sydney majoring in Opera and am now doing my Masters in Music Therapy at Victoria University. I am on placement at Kimi Ora school for four months and will be at the Evans Bay Satellite site on Tuesdays.

Touch Compass is New Zealand's only professional inclusive dance company, forming the points where disabled and non-disabled dancers meet on the floor and in mid-air. Specialising in aerial work and dance-theatre, our performances draw from Contact Improvisation, a dance practice that emerged out of the '70s and has been taken to spectacular realms in the 2000s. We've been challenging perceptions about what dance is and who can do it for 16 years now – and it's working. One of only 22 arts organisations to receive recurrent Creative New Zealand funding, our ground-breaking performances have won national and international acclaim. In fact, people often tell us they were completely changed by seeing one of them. Great. Social change is what we're all about.
